San Francisco, CA

On June 13 -15 FABERNOVEL, in partnership with Webshell, is bringing their global API conference series back to San Francisco. This year API days SF will explore how tech innovation is disrupting the car industry. The two-day conference and hackathon at PARISOMA will showcase the major players behind the transformation of the auto industry and examine the ripple effects into industries beyond car manufacturers.

Software is disrupting yet another aspect of our lives by bringing connectivity to the open road. It is transforming the auto industry from one about the mechanics to one about the software. Software is now eating our cars too and redefining the relationship between us and the world we drive in.

APIs are leading this revolution by allowing cars to enter the ubiquitous age of connectivity. As API evangelists, FABERNOVEL and Webshell recognized the potential of this disruption and decided to organize their fifth API days conference around the Connected Car Revolution.

Highlights from the 2014 API days SF include keynote address from Larry Burns, advisor for Google Self-Driving Cars; guest speakers from major players disrupting the industry including Tesla, Wit.ai, Mulesoft, IBM and more; and panel discussions on the future of connected cars and the implications on various industries.
